VOCABULARY OF THE PONAPE DIALECT, PONAPE-ENGLISH AND ENGLISH-PONAPE;

WITH A GRAMMATICAL SKETCH.

BY REV. LUTHER H. GULICK, M.D.,
LATELY MISSIONARY OF THE A. B. C. F. M. IN MICRONESIA.

Presented to the Society October 12th, 1871.

THIS Vocabulary by no means claims to be a complete list of Ponape words. My effort has always been rather to secure accurate lexical and grammatical knowledge of such words and phrases as came in my way, than to distend my list. Hence there are a great number of technical terms, relating to the various native arts and customs, and many poetical and nearly or quite obsolete words, that have escaped my pen and even my ear; together with, no doubt, some that occur more or less frequently in common parlance. Many additional points of interest will be brought out in a perfect dictionary, should any one have the knowledge and leisure to compile it; but I shall have greatly failed of my object, if this attempt, together with the appended Grammatical Notes, do not lay open all the more important particulars needed by practical students and by scientific philologists.

As to the definitions, no one who has endeavored to put down even the more obvious meanings of the words of an uncultivated tongue will be surprised at my acknowledgment of the imperfections of this first extended attempt upon the dialect of Ponape.

The numerous nouns which are never used without a possessive I have usually entered without the pronominal suffix; always, however, noting the fact that they are not to be used alone.

Adjectives I have in general divested of the substantive prefix me.

Of verbs I give the radical parts only, subjoining the most common forms of combination with directives. Occasionally I have set down a radical with a definition only of a special form of it, being uncertain as to the true power of the root itself. In certain other cases, I have not attempted to distinguish the radical, but have given it along with what is palpably its directive. Further knowledge is needed in order to resolve these words. Only in cases that appeared to me doubtful have I entered verbs with the causative prefix ka.

I have given some words as spelt in my Ponape books, though I may have since thought best to change the orthography; in which case, reference is made to the later spelling.

The system of orthography used is that of Lepsius (as set forth in his Standard Alphabet, Berlin, 1863), but with the omission of all diacritical signs which are not absolutely necessary. Thus, the short vowels are left unmarked, only the long being distinguished by the horizontal line above; and the closer e and o are unmarked, only the opener being distinguished by the horizontal stroke below. Thus ā is the sound in art, father.

a nearly as in and.

ē as in they (but without the vanish of i).

e nearly as in met.

ĕ as in French mère, nearly as in English care.

e the same, shorter.

ī as in machine, pique.

i as in pin, nearly.

ō as in note (but without the vanish of u).

o the same, shorter.

ō as in or, or as a in all.

o the same, shorter.

o nearly as u in but, current.

ū as in rule.

u as in pull.

ai as in aisle, aye ("long i").

au as ou, ow in found, cow.

j as English j, ch (in church), ts, etc.

k as English k, g.

l, m, n as in their ordinary English use.

ñ as n in sink, finger, or ng in singing.

p as English p, b.

t as English t, d.

w as English w.

For further particulars, especially the non-distinction of surd and sonant articulations, see the Grammatical Notes.

The alphabet used in the missionary publications in Ponape is the same with the above, only (for lack of means) with rejection of all diacritical signs; so that there is no distinction of e and ĕ, of o, o, and o, of n and ñ.

The Vocabulary was worked out before the author's departure from Micronesia, and has been for many years lost, owing to the death of the gentleman in whose hands it was deposited.

I. PONAPE-ENGLISH VOCABULARY.

- ápijo*, adj. fluttering, agitated, fearful.
- ápoñ*, adj. four (the radical is a, which is found in the compounds paijok etc.).
- apōñ*, n. the fourth month of the Ponape year; also, the ceremonies connected with the canoe-launches of that month.
- apō'ñilōñ*, n. [pō'ñipō'ñ, lōñ] the north.
- ápot*, adj. [at, pōt] one (applied only to stick-like objects; when used alone it means) another one.
- apū'ki*, adj. one hundred (used in numbering animals, sticks, stick-like objects, and sundry more valued articles, such as yams, mats, etc.: apū'ki means 'one thousand' when used in numbering the mass of less valued objects, such as cocoa-nuts, bread-fruit, etc.).
- ápwal*, adj. steep, rough (as applied to land and roads); difficult, not easy, hard to be performed.
- ápwal*, n. care, attention.
- apwā'li*, v. [cf. pali] takes sides with, defend; serve, obey; take care of, be attentive to; honor, reverence.
- ār*, pron. (poss. dual or plur.) their, theirs.
- arā*, pron. (dual poss.) [ar and a, the sign of duality] their (two).
- arái*, adj. [cf. rairai] long, extended, drawn out.
- arāil*, pron. (plur. poss.) [ar and ail, sign of plurality] their, theirs.
- aramáj*, n. a man; persons in general, any person indefinitely; a body of people, inhabitants; common people (not chiefs).
- ári*, adv. well (the most frequently used word in the language; used as well is in English, elliptically for it is well, and as an expression of satisfaction with what has been said or done; or merely expletive, as in "well, the work is done;" "well, let us go").
- ārī*, adj. two (the root used in combination is rī).
- ārīr*, v. squat in token and attitude of respect about a chief; pay court (ārīrī, the common form; ārīarīrī, reduplicated form).
- ārīripa*, n. [ariri, pa] the circle of respect about a chief; a court.
- áruwan*, v. know, learn: áruwanakila, know, have learned, thoroughly understand.
- āt*, n. an oceanic current; a current of air in the nostrils, the breath.
- āt*, adj. one (the radical is evidently ā, as seen in amen, apot, apuki etc.).
- āt*, pron. (poss. plur. and dual) our, our two.
- ātá*, pron. (dual poss.) [at and a, the sign of duality] our two (inclusive of the person addressed).

- ā'tā*, n. a name, that by which any thing is called; a proper name (in distinction from a title or surname).
- atā'ūl*, pron. (plur. poss.) [at and ūl, the sign of plurality] our (inclusive of the persons addressed).
- atānaki*, v. possess or receive or take a name; be named.
- ā'ī*, v. take with violence, snatch, levy upon.
- ā'tū*, adj. nine (the root is tu).
- au*, v. ride astride on some one's back.
- au'ū*, v. wait, tarry, delay, expect, await: au'oto, au'akito, wait for, await the coming of; au'ū ia, wait for me (often used as a threat to children, 'look out for me! take care!').
- ā'ūpūil*, v. (cf. pūil) turn towards: ā'ūpūilakioñ, be turned towards by.
- ā'ūramen*, n. dream.—v. dream.
- ā'ūramēi*, v. prepare a pontal (cocoa-nut shell) for jokau (ava) by the first expression of juice into it (a sort of dedication, though unattended by religious ceremonies).
- aut*, v. fill, pour into; impart evil-minded or suspicious thoughts.
- ā'ūtapon*, v. [aut and pōn, 'round'] roll up a loj with the sheet inside.
- au'ō'kamai*, n. the eleventh month.

- ēk*, see ērēk.
- el*, v. rub, chafe, apply a liniment by rubbing: ēliel (reduplicated form).
- ēl*, n. a string of beads or flowers (often used as a mere numerative particle in numbering any thing strung).
- ēle*, adv. probably, likely, possibly.
- ēlep*, n. [e perhaps from a of at, and lep or lepen] a part, a half, if taken from the length of an article; another half or part.
- ēlu*, adj. [lu?] cooked, thoroughly done.
- en*, prep. of, belonging to, about, concerning [the proper spelling is ōn, which shows its relation to ōn, the directive].
- en* (the sign of the imperative mood, probably a modified significance of en the preposition).
- en*, pron. this (it often has the power of a definite article only).
- er* (a sign of completed action, and consequently of past time: e. g. erāla, completed; ereti, finish up, complete).

- erer*, adj. [er] complete, perfected, finished (used principally in the windward tribes, where the lee tribes use anqkier, which see).
- ērēk*, adj. ten (applied only to animated objects, sticks, and a few objects like yams, mats, etc. : it is only carried into combination for animals and stick-like objects; frequently spelt ēk).
- ēt*, n. a bag, sack, pocket : et en mōña, the bag for food, the stomach.
- ēt*, interr. what? (used in asking 'what is your, or his, name?' in the weather tribes): te et ata (pronounced tet ata), or what name? i. e. something of that name, something like that, something of that kind; a jota pan wato kapet, te et ata? will he not bring a knife, or something of that kind? a pan koto lakop, te et ata, he will come to-morrow, or some such time.
- et*, pron. this.
- ēta*, v. sharpen, as on a hone or grind-stone.
- eten*, n. the noon or midnight next following the time of speaking.
- eténiai*, n. [at? (a current) en, i euphonic, ai the radical of fire, though never used alone] smoke, (literally) the current from fire.
- eténiai*, v. call, to summon with a loud voice (applied only to a chief's calling).
- ētenpil*, n. [at? en, pil] steam.
- ēti*, ētīē'ti, v. [ēt, a bag] bag, pocket; (consequently) put together in one's memory (as though the memory were something like a bag, somewhere in the regions of the ēt en mōña); carefully retain the remembrance of.
- ētiet*, adj. [et, the root of the words eteniai and etenpil] smoky, clouded by smoke, bedimmed as with smoke.
- eu*, adj. [the e perhaps modified from the a of at; u is a suffixed particle used in enumerating fruits, etc.] one; another, one more; a different one.
- ēurān*, n. [eu, ran] another day, some day, one day hereafter, sometime in the future.
- i*, pron. (first pers. sing.) I.
- i*, adv. (a directive, significant of going from: it is to be pronounced yi, and should be so spelt had we a y).
- ī*, pron. (third pers. sing. nom. and obj.) he (when in the nominative, me is always used in apposition with it: e. g. i me wiata, 'he the one that did (it),' or 'he did it').
- ia*, adv. where (an interrogative of place primarily: also used for ij in asking the names of persons or things, in the windward tribes; as ia ata? 'where the name?' i. e. 'what the name?')
- ia*, pron. (first pers. sing. obj.) me.
- ia* (a particle added to adjectives to form a second degree).
- iai*, n. fire [Polynesian ahi: see kijeniai, under kij].
- iā'ia*, n. a rainbow (also pronounced by some aia, which see).
- iā'jata*, v. come to life after supposed or real death (a ceremonious term applied only to the reviving of chiefs etc.).
- iat*, adv. when? at what time?
- iatua*, adv. [ia, tua] like what, similar to what, in what manner, how.

- ién*, adv. here; look here (used in calling attention); thus.
- iénen*, adv. [ien, en, pronoun] here, in this place (to be used only when we should say "it is here").
- ierō'j*, n. an only son: ierō'j amen, an only begotten son.
- iéramen*, adv. no, not, do not (to be used only when, in reply to a query, one would say "do not do it").
- iet*, adv. here, in this place (often used in merely calling attention).
- iétet*, adv. [iet, et, pronoun] here, in this place (more emphatic than merely iet; equivalent to 'here it is').
- ij*, pron. who? which? (sometimes in the lee tribe it is also used interrogatively for what?)
- ijánaki*, v. improve; look out for, be on the watch against.
- ijau*, n. the zamanu tree (calophyllum).
- ijia'kan*, adj. [eij, erk] seventy (used in numbering sticks or timbers, and everything that, to the native, is connected in idea with separate sticks, as trees and canoes; also in counting persons).
- ijiel*, adj. [eij, el] seven (strings, or objects strung on strings).
- ijjok*, adj. [eij, eijok] seventy (used in enumerating all most common objects).
- ijik*, v. set fire to, burn up, singe.

me, n. [Polyn. mea] Its elementary idea is that of 'thing,' 'substance,' 'any person or thing mentioned.' 1. It becomes a component part of adjectives: e. g. kajalel, 'beautiful,' mekajalel, 'thing beautiful,' or 'the thing is beautiful;' mau, 'good;' memau (pronounced mumau) 'thing good,' or 'the thing (or it) is beautiful.' 2. It very commonly takes the power of a personal pronoun, and stands in apposition with the nominative of a verb, so heightening the affirmative force of a sentence, and almost entitling it to the term "affirmative particle:—" e. g. kowa me wiata, 'you are the one that did (it);' ape me koto, 'such a one has come.' 3. It not infrequently has the power of a relative pronoun: e. g. kō'n wātō me i kajēla, 'do you bring what I threw away.'

II. ENGLISH-PONAPE VOCABULARY.

NOTE BY THE COMMITTEE OF PUBLICATION.

As the printing of the preceding part of the Vocabulary was just beginning, Dr. Gulick was called, earlier than had been expected, to proceed to a new mission-field, so that the Committee were deprived of his expected help in carrying the work through the press. The loss, however, was of less account than it would otherwise have been, as the author had quitted Ponape a number of years ago, and was unwilling now to trust himself to undertake more than the simple reproduction in print of the recorded results of his earlier studies in Ponapean. On coming, now, to take up the second part, the Committee found that it was not at all a reversal of the other Vocabulary, but a quite independent work, containing not a few Ponape forms, even root-words, which were not given in the other, and, on the other hand, omitting many English words of which the Ponape equivalents were there given, as well as Ponape equivalents given for the English words included. This state of things we have thought it incumbent on us to remove, at least to a certain degree. We have accordingly put into an "Appendix" to the Ponape-English Vocabulary all the words occurring in the English-Ponape which were not with some confidence referable to roots already set down; and have made such insertions and additions in the English-Ponape Vocabulary as render it a tolerably complete key to the other, with at least one reference to each Ponape root or independent word. We have given also, in brackets, after each word, the root or word under which it is mentioned in the Ponape-English part; or, if the word is a derivative or related word not there expressly mentioned, we have referred to it by a cf. within the brackets—except, in either case, where the root itself or other derivatives from it immediately precede. There are frequent inconsistencies of orthography between the two vocabularies: this we have taken account of by adding in the following part an exclamation-point (not used as sign of punctuation) to every word which is to be found differently written in the preceding part. The occurrence of a word here as another part of speech from there, or as parts of speech additional to those there defined, we have, however, passed without notice: it is sufficiently explained by the generally variable character of Ponapean words.

GRAMMATICAL SKETCH.

THE following sketch of Ponape grammar is founded upon a little work entitled "Notes on the Grammar of the Ponape Dialect, by L. H. Gulick, M.D.," prepared in 1856, and printed at Honolulu in 1858 (12mo., pp. 39), but in a small edition only, and not offered for sale, so as hardly to admit of being regarded as "published." It has been abridged and recast, with slight additions here and there from the preceding Vocabularies. Having been prepared some years earlier than the latter, its orthography is different from theirs, and one main point in its reduction to the present form has been the adaptation of orthography. This has been made, as well as the case admitted, from the Vocabularies themselves, with the occasional necessity of selecting among the slight varieties of spelling there presented; and no authority save one thus derived belongs to the forms actually given here; since the "Notes" rarely mark quantity, and never accent, and, having been printed without the author's correction, show numerous inaccuracies of diacritical distinction, or other. An important disagreement, removed by us, between the Vocabularies and the "Notes," is the writing of the verbal directives in the latter as separate words: see what is said below (under Verbal Directives). An occasional remark or addition is made by us in brackets. COMM. OF PUBL.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

a, e, i, o, u have their "Italian" sounds (as in far, prey, pique, pole, rule), and occur either long or short, the long value being written with the usual line above the letter: thus, ā, ē, ī, ō, ū.

e, o (long and short) denote the opener qualities of e and o; the former marks the sound of French è in mère (nearly our a in care); the latter, the long sound in for (or a in all, aw in awful) and the short in not.

o represents the "neutral" vowel-sound (in come, but, blood, double); it does not occur as long.

The diphthongs are to be pronounced by putting together the sounds of the single vowels composing them: thus, ai and au are the English "long i" and ou or ow sounds, respectively (in aisle or isle, in found and cow).

[The not infrequent inconsistencies exhibited in the orthography of the same word in different parts of the Vocabulary (especially in respect to quantity, less often in other respects) show that the distinctions laid down are somewhat evanescent, or that the author had not succeeded in fully mastering them.]

l, m, n, r, w have the same sound as in English.

ñ represents the guttural nasal, the English ng sound, as in singing.

The surd and sonant mutes, k and g, t and d, p and b, are not distinguished by the Ponapeans, who use the two sounds interchangeably, but with a decided tendency toward the surd utterance; for which reason the k, t, and p are alone written in this work. The ear of a foreigner, on his first arrival, is apt to catch these sounds as more often sonant.

In like manner, there is a series of variable and interchangeable sounds, including our "g soft" or j, and the corresponding surd ch, and verging sometimes even upon sh and ts, for which the single character j is here employed, as being, on the whole, the truest rendering of the entire group.

The general law of Polynesian euphony, that "every syllable must terminate in a vowel, and two consonants are never heard without a vowel between them," suffers many exceptions in Ponapean, in the occurrence of numerous final consonants, and of occasional double consonants. Where, however, two words are pronounced together, the first ending and the second beginning with a consonant, there is always a slight sound, a half-vowel or sh'va, introduced between them. And this euphonic addition is so generally pronounced, in common conversation, with many words ending in consonants, as to seem a part of them; so that it is one of our greatest difficulties in reducing the language to writing to know when and how to represent such sounds.

There are many slight changes made in words when thrown into compounds, or otherwise brought into juxtaposition. These have not yet been reduced to rule. In the native poetry, as might be expected, great changes are made in the terminal letters.

The greater number of words of two syllables are accented on the first.

ETYMOLOGY AND SYNTAX.

The language being destitute of any proper inflection, it will be convenient to throw together all that would otherwise be said separately under these heads.

Nouns.

Gender is distinguished either by the use of independent words or by the addition of ōl, 'male,' and tī, 'female.' Thus, kīn, 'cock,' lū'tōk, 'hen,' pā'pā, 'father,' nō'nō, 'mother,' tōk ōl, 'drake,' tōk tī, 'duck.' The sex of animals recently introduced is, of course, usually denoted by the second method.

Number is either to be gathered from the requirement of the sense, or is marked by accompanying pronominal words or numerals. Thus, ōl o me wī'ata, 'that man did it,' but ōl akaí etc., 'some men;' ōl ámen me wī'ata, 'a man did it,' but ōl rī'amen etc., 'two men;' tatū'a ōn tū'ka ápot, 'what of [this] one stick?' but . . . tū'ka pūka, 'of these sticks.'

The relations of case are signified either by the mode of collocation or by propositions.

[pa is noted in the Pon.-Eng. Vocabulary as "a syllable which added to many verbs makes nouns."]

ARTICLES.

It is very questionable whether there is anything in the language deserving the name of article. If there be an article, it is postpositive, which in one of the Micronesian languages, where the articles have hitherto been recognized as prefixed, indicates that it is not properly such. See the pronouns, below, and the Vocab., under "a."

ADJECTIVES.

No distinction of gender, number, or case, is made in adjectives.

A kind of comparison is effected by the addition of ia (conjectured to be a modified er, the verbal particle significant of perfected action), and by other periphrastic methods. Thus, kájalel, 'beautiful,' kájalelia, 'most beautiful;' tō'utō'u, 'heavy,' tō'utō'ua, 'very heavy;' met kájalel jōñ metē'u, 'this is beautiful from that one' (i. è. 'more beautiful than that'); mētō rēn akij, 'distant with a little' (i. e. 'a little further'); met kē'lail kōwā'lāp, 'this is strong exceedingly;' memāu mēnen, mejū'it metē'u, 'good this one, bad that one' (i. e. 'this is better than that').

The prefix me is very generally added to adjectives, especially numerative adjectives, and so intimately connected with them as to seem an essential part of them: thus, kájalel or mekájalel, 'beautiful;' āpot or mēāpot, 'one;' jī'lū or mējīlū, 'three.'

NUMERALS.

The first nine numerals, in their simple or uncombined form, are as follows:

1. āt.	4. āpōñ.	7. ēj.
2. ā'ri.	5. ālim.	8. āwal.
3. ējil.	6. āñ.	9. ā'tū.

In ordinary numeration, however, these numerals (in a somewhat abbreviated form) have appended to them certain particles, each used in numbering a particular class of objects. Thus:

men [cf. mān, 'animal'] is used in the numbering of all animated objects, and the series is āmen, rī'amen, jī'limen, pā'men, limmen, wōnamen, ījimen, wālūmen, tū'amen.

ū [cf. ūa, 'flower, fruit, seed'], in numbering fruits and all small globular objects ["most objects," "the great mass of common objects." Vocab.]: thus, eu, rī'au, jī'lū, pā'ū, limau, wōnū, ījū, wālū, tū'au.

pot, in numbering plants, sticks, and stick-like objects, as canoes (made from one stick), and hence ships, also fingers etc. etc.: thus, āpot, rī'āpot, jī'līpot, pā'pot, līmpot, wōnāpot, ījīpot, wālūpot, tū'āpot. It might be expected that boats, like canoes, would be counted with pot, but the habit is to use ū instead. So English forks are counted with ū, but knives with pot.

um, in numbering yams and bananas: thus, um, rī'um, jī'lum, pāum, limum, wónum, ijūm, wálum, tū'um.

kop, in numbering bundles of stick-like objects: thus, akop, rī'akop, jī'likop, pā'kop, limikop, wónakop, ijikop, wálukop, tū'akop.

ēl, in numbering strings of beads, wreaths, and the like: thus, el eu [? aēl? see Vocab., under "a" and metāiel], rī'ēl, jī'liēl, pā'ēl, limiēl, wónaēl, ijīēl, wāliēl, tū'ēl.

tūn, in numbering bunches of fruit tied together: thus, tūn eu [? atun? see Vocab., under tun, "a" and metātūn], rī'atūn, jī'li-tūn, pā'tūn, limitūn, wónitūn, ijitūn, wālitūn, tū'atūn.

pāk is equivalent to 'times,' and forms the series 'once, twice' etc.: thus, āpāk, rī'apāk, jī'lipāk, pā'pāk, limipāk, wónipāk, ijipāk, wālipāk, tū'apāk.

In the tens, the classification is quite different. There are three divisions only: 1. all animated objects, and all kinds of sticks or timbers, along with everything that, to the native, is connected in idea with separate sticks, as trees, canoes etc.; 2. yams, taro, mats, and a few of the most precious objects; 3. other common and less valued objects, not included in the first class.

Then, for 'ten,' ēr or ēk applies to both the first and second classes, naul to the second only, ējok or ijok to the third only, katañaul to all the three.

For the following tens, to 'ninety,' compounds of the units with ēk or ēr (in three cases, with ākan instead) are used for the first class, compounds with ējok for both the others: that is to say, the series is, for animated and stick-like objects, as follows: rī'ēr, jiliā'kan, pēr, limēr, wónēr, ijīā'kan, wāliā'kan, tū'ēr; for all other objects, rī'ajok, jī'lijok, pājok, limaijok, wónijok, ijijok, wālijok, tū'ajok. [The Eng.-Pon. Vocab. gives also pā'ñaul for 'forty,' and adds an "etc." to the double forms of the other tens, as if they also might be formed in the same manner.]

For a 'hundred,' is used in the first two classes apū'ki; for a 'thousand,' in the same, kit. In the third class, including the mass of common objects, ñaul signifies a 'hundred,' and apū'ki a 'thousand.' Nen is 'ten thousand,' or perhaps more generally an indefinitely large number. And even kit is used with the same indefiniteness.

The odd numbers are found by putting the proper unit form after the proper ten; thus, 'fifteen' is ijok limau, ēk limmen etc.; 'sixty-three' is wónēr jī'limen, wónijok jī'lipot etc. etc., according to the character of the objects counted. 'Five hundred' is limapūki or limōñaul; and so on.

Ordinals are formed by prefixing the causative ka and adding the er of completion: thus, me ka jī'lū er or i, 'that making the three' (i. e. 'third'); me ka pāū er or i, 'fourth.'

PRONOUNS.

The pronouns are numerous, and are perhaps the most difficult of the parts of speech for a foreigner to use idiomatically.

Personal Pronouns.

First person singular. As subject, i is the almost universally applicable pronoun; ńai is emphatic, used especially in reply to questions. The objective form appears to be ia. [According to the Eng.-Pon. Vocab., 'me' is expressed also by both i and ńai.] Thus, i pan w'ata, 'I am going to do;' i po'kapo'ka iuk, 'I love you;' ij me w'ata? ńai! 'who did it? I;' tā, ńai me kápin, 'what, am I the captain?' ij me pan iqń ia, 'who will [go] with me?'

First person dual. kít is the form generally used, both as subject and as object; the numeral rí'amen, 'two,' is added to distinguish it from the plural kít only when it is necessary expressly to state the number. kitā' is the only exclusively dual form; it is emphatic, and always includes the person addressed. Thus, kit me rí'amen me kō'to, 'we two have come;' kitā' pan kō'la 'n wai, 'we [two] will go to foreign regions.'

First person plural. kít may or may not include the persons addressed; kitāil is always inclusive. Thus, kít me pan w'ata, 'we will do [it];' kitāil qn w'ata, 'let us do it' (lit'ly, 'we [are] to do [it]'). kitāil! 'we!' often signifies 'come! let us now!'

Second person singular. kq'mwi is employed only in addressing high chiefs, and kqm only in addressing chiefs. This is apparently the primitive form, having as its radical qm, which is found in nearly all the pronominal forms of this person; wi is added also to other pronouns when addressing chiefs. kō'wa [the Grammar writes always kowe] is emphatic, chiefly used in replying to questions. ko, kq, k' are contractions of kō'wa, and are the forms most commonly used. As object, kq'mwi and kō'wa are both used, but not often; ik or iuk is most frequent when not addressing chiefs; and in one tribe, at least, ik is applied to chiefs only. In these last forms, the ū and ĩ may be conjectured to be parts of obsolete prepositions, while the k is that of ko etc. Examples are: kq'mwi (or kqm) qoteto [cf. qot] nan im, 'do thou come into the house;' ij me pan rü'kela? kō'wa, 'who will hide away? you;' ko jō'ta pan kō'to? 'are you not going to come?' tā me k'inta, 'what did you say?' i májak kq'mwi, 'I am afraid of you;' i po'kopo'ka iuk eta, 'I love you only;' i pan kō'qń ik, 'I will go to you.'

Second person dual. The form is kqmā'. Thus, kqmā' jō'ta pan kō'to? 'are you two not going to come?' i pan tā'taki kqmā', 'I shall dislike you both;' kqmā'! kō'to! 'you two! come!'

Second person plural. The form is kqmaíl.

Third person singular. The most important form as subject is ĩ [the Vocab. says, always followed by me, when used as subject], distinguished from i, 'I,' by quantity and accent. A less emphatic form is a, but the cases where it should be used instead of ĩ are not easy to define. More emphatic than either is lāp (of which a may be a contraction). Of these words, ĩ is least frequently used as object. [The Eng.-Pon. Vocab. adds lāmpē'n (cf. pēn) as meaning 'she, her'.] Examples are: ĩ me pan w'ata, 'he is the one that will do it;' a pan wī'ata, 'he will do it;' ko pan kāñ lāp, 'you will dislike him;' ōl me intaiōñ ī, 'the man said to him;' ij me kī'ōñ lāp, 'who gave to him?'

Third person dual. The forms, as subject and as object, are ir and irā', the former used as plural also, the latter exclusively dual. Thus, irā' jō'ta pan kō'to? 'are they two not going to come?' i jē'ja, ir pweipwei, 'I do not know, they two are foolish;' i kā'ñela irā', 'I dislike them both.'

Third person plural. There are two forms, ir and irāil, of which the former is more common in rapid conversation. Example: ir pan kō'to iat? 'when are they coming?' [The Vocab. adds ra, r', as contracted forms of irāil.]

The simple possessive forms of these pronouns are: in the first person, singular, ai; dual and plural, āt; dual only (inclusive), ātā'; plural only (inclusive), atail;—in the second person, singular, ām (emphatic, and to be used with certain nouns), qm; dual, qmā'; plural, qmāil;—in the third person, singular, ā; dual and plural, ār; dual only, arā'; plural only, arāil. Besides these, there is a series formed by compounding them with the preposition nain, 'belonging to,' which is generally reduced to a mere n': thus, first person, n'ai, nai't, nai'tā (inclusive), nai'tail (do.); second person, singular, n'ōm [dual and plural apparently wanting]; third person, singular, n'ā; dual and plural, nai'r; dual only, nai'rā; plural only, nai'rail. The compound forms are more emphatic than the simple, and may be employed substantively, or without the noun expressed; the simple forms always requiring to be immediately accompanied by the possessed object. Moreover, there is a rule, apparently arbitrary but requiring to be observed, that n'ai etc. are to be employed with certain nouns, namely jō'kau, jeu ['sugar-cane;' not in Vocab.], ūt, kiti, jēri, kapet ['? dress?' cf. kāpat, App. to Pon.-Eng. Vocab.], mālek etc. [this "etc." is nowhere filled up], while ai etc. are used with all other nouns. Examples: ai kō'pōu mēnen, 'my basket this;' ai tū'ka pūka, 'my sticks these;' n'ai mēnen, 'this [is] mine;' n'ai jō'kau, 'my jō'kau;' n'ai [? book has ai] jeu, 'my sugar-cane;' āt mō'ña kō'jōñ er, 'the food of us two is gone;' nai't jō'kau, āt jī'la, 'our jō'kau, our hatchet;' nai'tā kiti, 'the dog of us two:'—ām līkau, ām mō'ña, 'your cloth, your food;' qm kō'pōu, im qm, 'your basket, your house;' en ij met? n'ōm or ām, 'to whom this? (i. e. whose is this?) yours;' i pan kā'ñela qmā' kō'we, 'I shall not like your two going away:'—ā līkau, im ā, 'his cloth, his house;' nain ijipau, n'ā, 'belonging to the king, his' (i. e. 'his children'); nain ij met? n'ā, 'whose is this? his;' arā' loj, nai'rā mō'ña, 'the mats, the food of them two;' kāiti im ar met, 'is not this their house?'

There is also a series of objective pronouns made by compounding with these possessive forms the preposition ren, 'with, to, for, of,' in the abbreviated condition of re (if this be not the proper root, and ren a contraction of re en): thus, first person re'i, re'āt, re'atail; second person, re'm or re'mwi, re'mā, re'mail; third person, r'a, re'r, re'ra, re'rail. Examples are: tā me ko jō jō itok rēi? 'why did you not ask me?' i pan mumáuteve rē'mā, 'I will visit you two;' kī'qñ r'a, 'give to him;' kī'qñ rē'ra, 'give to them two;' i jē'ja, rē'r, 'I do not know; [it is] with them.'

[The Vocab. adds a pronoun je, used indefinitely as nom. sing. and pl., first and third persons.]

The complete scheme of personal pronouns is, then, as follows:

FIRST PERSON.

	sing.	dual.	plur.
Subj.	i, nai [je].	kūt, kitā' .	kūt, kitāil [je].
Obj.	ia, i, nai, rē'i .	kūt, rē'at .	kūt, rē'at, rē'atail .
Poss.	ai, n'ai .	āt, ātā', nai't, nai'tā .	āt, atāil, nai't, nai'tail .

SECOND PERSON.

	sing.	dual.	plur.
Subj.	kə'mwi, kəm, kō'wa, ko, kə, k' .	kəmə' .	kəməil .
Obj.	kə'mwi, kō'wa, uk, iuk, ik, rē'm, rē'mwi .	kəmə', rē'mā .	kəməil, rē'mail .
Poss.	ām, əm, n'ōm .	əmā' .	əmāil .

THIRD PERSON.

	sing.	dual.	plur.
Subj.	ī, a, lāp [lāmpē'n, je].	īr, irā' .	īr, irāil [je, ra, r'].
Obj.	ī, a, lāp, r'a [lāmpē'n].	īr, irā', rē'rā .	īr, irāil, rē'r, rē'rail .
Poss.	ā, n'ā .	ār, arā', nai'ra .	ār, arāil, nai'rail .

Demonstratives.

The distinction between the nearer and remoter object, this and that etc., is hardly established in this language.

Singular forms: en, uen, mēnen; et, uet, met, mūt, mūet; o, ko.

Of these, uen seems only a euphonic variation of en, 'this;' mēnen is mē'n en, 'this thing,' and might well enough be so written. Examples: tatū'a en (prep.) wār en? 'what about this canoe?' mēnen en Kə'ta majān [majāni], 'this is what God has commanded;' i kāñ mēnen, 'I dislike this thing.'

et also means 'this;' its distinction from en is hard to define, and probably only to be learned by long practice; perhaps it implies locality more: uet is but a euphonic form: met, 'this thing,' is probably me et, and mūt a modification of it, which usually, if not always, precedes the noun, and refers to quality: mūet is me uet, and, like the other members of its class, can be used only in certain, hardly definable, connections. Examples: ij me jāpīnaki jāp et? 'who possesses (or takes care of) this land?' ūle pūk uet, 'take this book;' i kā'nēla met, 'I dislike this thing;' mūt mau əm wī'a, 'this is good, your doing' (i. e. 'what you have done is good'); ko en ūle mūet, 'you take this.'

It may be a question whether o and ko find their most appropriate place here. I am inclined to recognize in them the o (sometimes ko) of the Polynesian dialects, which Mr. Hale speaks of as "a peculiar particle to mark the nominative, or rather the agent of a sentence," and which Mr. Anderson would treat as "distinct from any other part of speech," terming it simply "the o emphatic." o and ko are by no means so much used in Ponapean as in some of the more eastern dialects of Polynesia; and it is interesting that here they are postfixed, while in the great majority of dialects they are prefixed. Their function here is, it seems to me, only to give a sort of demonstrative emphasis to a noun in answer to a question, and also occasionally when merely the subject of a verb. I should spell indifferently ko or ka, the vowel being a very short one. I can give no rules controlling the selection of one form of the particle rather than the other in any given case. Examples: ia āl o? 'where is the (or that) road (one supposed to have been previously an object of attention);' ia kápít eko? 'where is that knife?' ia málek en wél eko? 'where is that fowl of the bush (i. e. wild fowl)?'

Plural forms: púka [púkat]; [áka, 'ka, okao, 'kao,] akan, kan; [mépaka,] mépakai, mépako [mépakao, mépakan].

púka, 'these' or 'those,' is applied either to persons or things; it is perhaps related with po'kon, 'assembly, assemble;' [púkat is in the Vocab. declared "more emphatic."] [For aka or 'ka, 'these, those, sign of plurality,' and okao, 'kao (or oko, okau), do., see the Vocab.] akan, 'kan' has perhaps less demonstrative force than any other word of the class, often seeming to be hardly more than a sign of plurality; it applies rather to things than to persons, and may be translated 'all these' or 'all those.' mépaka etc. are evidently compounds of met, altered to mep, and aka etc.; mépakai is applicable to things only [as are also the others?], and means 'these' rather than 'those;' mépako means 'those' rather than 'these.' Examples: tatū'a en tū'ka púka? 'what of these sticks?' ko jō'ta pan ále mēpakai? 'are you not going to take them?' mépako me pan kō'la 'n Oahu, 'those are going to Oahu;' Kraist me pan kamáurita tō'a 'n jāp akan, 'Christ will make alive the people of all lands.'

Interrogatives.

ij means 'who? which?' and occasionally [in the lee tribe] 'what?'

et, 'what?' is used only in the weather tribes, in inquiring the name of a person, place, or thing [cf. Vocab.].

tā means 'what?' and sometimes 'why?'—i. e. 'what makes,' 'what reason.' [cf. tatū'a, 'like what?' tōket, 'what thing?' tapa, metapa, 'how many?' mēnta, 'why?'] ia, 'where?' and in certain cases (see Vocab.) 'what?' is to be ranked here; mēnia (mēn ia) means 'which?'

Examples: ij me mī'mī nan im? 'who lives in the house?' ij é'ta (or á'tā) en ōl? 'what [is the] name of [the] man?' et é'ta ōl? do.; tā me ko men ále? 'what do you wish to take?' kápit etā ko pan maúki [see mau]? 'which knife will you choose?' mēnia lí-kau ko pan ále? 'which cloth will you take?' mēnia im en [the Gr. has eu]? 'what house is this?' ia é'ta en jōp? 'what is the name of the ship?'

Indefinites.

ápe is the most indefinite of pronouns, being applicable to any kind of person or thing, under any possible conditions. akái, 'kai, méakái mean 'some, several, some persons or things.' Examples are: ápe me kau'é'la ápe, 'somebody (or something) injured somebody (or something);' ále ápe a kí'ōñ ren ápe, 'take this (that or some) thing and give to this (that or some) person;' akái me maúki, akái jō, 'some like it, some not;' wá'to akái áriñ, kí'ti akái, 'bring some (of the) cocoa-nuts, leave some.'

A series of indefinite quasi-pronouns is found by prefixing me to the series of words for 'one,' amen, apōt etc.: thus, méamen, 'some or any animated object;' méapōt, 'some or any stick-like object;' méakōp, 'some one bundle or package.' A similar formation is méakōt, 'something, anything' [see kōt].

Another series is made by prefixing met to the same numerals, giving the sense of 'alone' [cf. ta etc. 'alone']: thus, *metáko*p, metáiel, metámen, 'only one bunch or bundle' etc.

eu means 'one, another;' tē'u, 'the other one;' metē'u, 'the other one, next;' pī'tē'u, 'another one' (pīl, 'again, also').

me has in many cases the value of a relative pronoun: thus, ōl me rī ōm, 'the man that is your brother.'

VERBS.

The Ponape verb has no inflected forms expressing the relations of voice, mood, tense, number, or person. Such distinctions as are made in these respects are by means of particles.

An intensive or frequentative meaning is given to a verb by reduplication, of the whole or a part: thus, lōkái'a, 'talk,' lō'kalō-kái'a, 'talk busily, chatter;' tō'rapwa [here written pa], 'read,' tōntō'rapwa, 'read hard or intensely;' kīlōñ, kīlīkīlōñ, 'see, observe;' pātā'ki, 'teach,' pātāpātā'ki, 'teach frequently.' Sometimes a distinct meaning is given: as, wī'a, 'do,' wī'awī'a, 'decide.'

A causative force is given by the prefix ka (sometimes kau or ko): thus, mē'la, 'die,' kamē'la, 'kill;' maūrīta, 'come to life, get well, kamaūrīta, 'cause to recover, cure;' mōt, mōmō't, 'sit,' kaúmōt, 'visit for feasting' (said of a high chief); roñ, 'report, rumor,' korō'ñ, 'hear, listen.'

A desiderative meaning is given by prefixing men: thus, i men nīm pīl, 'I want to drink water, am thirsty;' i men mē'la, 'I wish to die.'

A potential meaning is given by a prefixed kin: thus, ko jō'ta kin wī'a met? 'can you not do this?' i kin káma iuk, 'I can beat you.'

The imperative sense of a verb is often increased by prefixing en or on: thus, ko en (or on) wā'to, 'do you bring [it]'; kōmā' en pō'kata, 'do you two lift [it].'

The syllable i, suffixed to intransitive verbs, renders them transitive, and seems to be especially used when the causative sign ka is prefixed. The suffixed particle ki seems sometimes so to change the relation between subject and object as to deserve the name "passive particle," or "sign of the passive voice;" but the point is quite obscure.

Verbal directives. In Ponapean, as in Polynesian dialects, the verbal action is generally conceived as having a motion or tendency in some direction, which is expressed by an appended particle, called a directive. Their peculiar significance is often hard for a foreigner to appreciate, and hence their elegant and effective use is, next to that of the pronouns, the hardest thing in the language to learn. They are added directly to the verbal root, and it is a practical question of some importance whether they shall or shall not be written as separate words. They are so written, it is believed, in all the neighboring Oceanic languages; yet in Ponapean their union with the verb appears to be closer than in most other dialects. The occasional intervention of the object between the verb and its directive makes strongly in favor of writing the latter separately. [It is always so written in the Grammar, but we have followed the author's later usage in the Vocabulary, and combined the verb and its directives into one word.]

The usual directives and their uses are as follows:

la (or ela) has a faint idea of departure; it might almost as well be termed a locative particle, or a sign of past time, as a directive of action, for it has neither power exclusively. It seems, however, best classed with the directives. It has a much less distinct sense, either of direction, location, or time, than in any other of the Polynesian dialects. Its radical significance is shown most clearly in the adverbs of place: compare palilá, 'the further side, beyond,' with palipá, 'under side,' palipō'wa, 'upper side,' palitó, 'hither side.' Many verbs do not admit the directive la, and no rule can be given for distinguishing them. Thus, pō'rata is applied to the appearing of blossoms, pō'rata to that of persons; ma'ula is said of goodness of behavior, ma'uta of goodness of weather—and so on.

ta (or eta) is expressive of motion upwards, and ti (or eti) of motion downwards: thus, ta'uta, 'climb up,' pa'urita, 'rise,' kō'ta, 'ascend;' kō'ti, 'descend,' pōpū'ti, 'fall down.'

to (or eto) expresses direction toward the speaker, and we (or awe, awe, eve) motion from or away: thus, kō'to, 'come hither,' wā'to, 'bring hither;' kō'we, 'go away, depart,' kíwe, 'give away,' wā'we, 'carry away.'

i ([or ii] pronounced yi) signifies something like going off or onward: thus, kō'ila, 'gone off,' or 'quite away from.'

lōn signifies 'in:' thus, kō'lōn, 'go in, enter.'

ōn [also a preposition] signifies something like 'to;' thus, kī'ōn, 'give to, deliver, add,' kō'ōn, 'go to.'

jōn [also adverb and preposition] means very distinctly 'from:' thus, kō'jōn, 'go from, be absent,' kī'jōn, 'take from, detach, abstract.'

pena means 'together:' thus, kō'pena, 'come together, assemble,' kī'pena, 'gather, collect.'

pajōn signifies 'separation:' thus, kō'pajōn, 'go apart, disperse,' kī'pajōn, 'separate, loosen, open.'

Several directives may be combined, simply by adding one to the other after the same verb, to signify compound ideas of direction.

The long vowels ā and ē are occasionally used before some of the directives, for a purpose hardly to be defined. They would seem to heighten the power of the following directive, but have perhaps a more distinct office: thus, kerē'ti, 'jump from (a canoe), disembark,' kerā'ta [Vocab. kārā'ta], 'jump into, embark,' ritīnāta, 'open (a door or lid),' ritīnēti, 'shut.'

Tense. The preterit may be called the ground-form of the verb. A verbal root, with or without directives, signifies past time unless the adverbs of present or future time, or the imperative particle, be expressed or understood. Emphatic forms of the preterit are made by some adverb of past time, or by the auxiliary word erea or erer, or its contraction er or ia, or even r simply. Thus, a jō'mala, 'he is gone,' a mē'ta, 'he is dead,' érer ā tetō'k, 'his work is finished,' pot jō'poi er? 'is not the pot boiled?' i mō'na-mō'na maj, 'I ate before, have eaten,' ñai me ñar maj, 'I saw before, have seen.'

Present time is denoted by met, 'this, here, now,' and āp, 'just now,' but these are often omitted, when the connection or circumstances make the time evident. Thus, i puūta met, 'I am cold,' i āp kō'to, 'I am just come, or came just now.'

Future time is expressed by the particles pan and anō'k [or no'k]. If there be any difference between the two particles, pan is significant of an immediate, and anō'k of a more remote future. It is remarkable that in the Kiti tribe anō'k or no'k or anō'kier is significant of past or completed action, like erer in the other tribes: thus, i pan wī'ata, 'I will do [it],' anō'k wī'ata, '[I] will do [it]'; kō-māul jō'ta pan kō'jōn met? 'are you not going to leave this place?'

The particle me is put in apposition with nouns and pronouns used as subject, and is almost universally employed with them through every possible form of the verb. It seems to lend emphasis to that of which any affirmation is made, and so be omitted where less attention is to be drawn to the agent than to the act. Thus, ī me inta, 'he said,' kō'wa me wī'ata, 'you (are the one that) did it.' Sometimes it seems to take the office of the substantive verb: thus, ñai me ī, 'I am he.'

ADVERBS.

The adverbs are to be found in the Vocabularies, but it may be convenient to put together here the most important of them. They are as follows:

met, métet, iet, iétet, ién, iénen, 'here' (or 'now'), iō'nen, mōnen, 'there,' jūli, 'here and there,' āp, 'now,' toka, 'then,' ūū'a, 'so.'
ia, 'where,' iat, nī, 'when,' iatua, 'how,' ira, 'how about.'
impa or 'mpa, līmwa, 'beside,' mō'wa, 'before,' mū'ri, 'after,' pō'wa, 'above,' pā, pā'n, ūlati'we, 'beneath,' palilá, 'beyond,' paliiwe, 'ahead,' kailáwe, 'forward.'
lō'li, 'in,' kōñ, 'from.'
ē or ei or iei, āñ, 'yes,' jō, jō'ta, jō'la, jēr (poet.), 'not,' pāo,
'not at all,' ieramen, 'do not,' kaíti, kaítik, 'is not?' kaik, kaiket,
'not yet.'
māj, 'very,' ta, eta, ōta, 'only,' pil, 'again,' pēn, 'of one's self.'
See also the Verbal Directives, above.

PREPOSITIONS.

The prepositions are en or ōn, 'of, for, to, about;' it loses its vowel after a final vowel, and is probably the final member of the prepositions ending in n. rē'n (probably re en: see the combinations of re with the pronouns, above), iqñ, iqñá'ki, 'with, along with.'
jōñ, 'from;' used also as a verbal directive.
ōñ, 'to' etc.; also a verbal directive.
nā'n, nī (chiefly of time), nī'n, 'in, inside,' nānapōñ, 'among.'
nain, 'belonging to.'
pō'n, 'above, upon;' pā'n, 'under.'
līmwa'n, impa'n, 'beside.'
aki, 'ki, ki'n, 'because of;' important words, which merit fuller elucidation than can be given here: they may be called causative particles. pwéki (pwé, ki) has the same meaning.
See further the Vocabularies, under the several words.

CONJUNCTIONS.

Conjunctions are few, and sparingly used: they are ā, 'and;' ō,
'and, or;' te, 'or, lest;' pil, ári, 'also;' me, 'if;' álau or 'lau,
'when;' pwé, 'because.'
Pronouns are sometimes used in a kind of conjunctive way:
thus, i me kō'to, i, in ā, 'he came, he, his mother.'

INTERJECTIONS.

The common interjections are ári, akári, ákai, ān, ē, ka, mo, o, tōketa. For their use, see the Vocabulary.

RULES OF POSITION.

The subject usually precedes the verb, but in the briefest sentences of simple affirmation may follow it. The object noun or pronoun follows the governing verb or preposition, usually after the verbal directives and er, but sometimes (especially a pronoun) between the verb and its directive.

Adjectives (including numerals) almost universally follow the nouns they qualify; but in brief affirmations, where hardly anything but the noun and adjective is expressed, the adjective may precede.

Possessive pronouns, in the great majority of instances, precede or follow the object possessed according to laws of euphony only; but when they denote children they follow; and they precede when in relation with verbal nouns.

Of the verbal particles, pan and anok precede the verb; men and kin, and the adverbs pēn and pil, come between these and the verb; en also precedes. The directives (with occasional intervention of the object) come after, and are followed by er.

Adverbs in general follow the word they qualify, whether adjective or verb. But adverbs of negation come before the verb, and even before pan and anok; the place of pil and pēn has been defined above. Adverbs of time have greater freedom of position.

CEREMONIOUS LANGUAGE.

The Ponapeans are quite ceremonious, and a large number of words are applicable only to chiefs. There are different classes of such words, applicable to different ranks of chiefs. And there is what may be called a spiritual dialect, used only in the pretended communications from spirits through privileged priests.

The words in the Pon.-Eng. Vocabulary noticed as of ceremonious usage are the following: ájijápwai, alimēna, alū'alū'a, anū, ániañ, ániani, apē, eténiai, id'jata, i'napa, itauári, jāk, jéimōk, jéimok, kaing'mwa, kaipō'kiti, kalā'nān, kākā'n, kaímōt, kau-nū'ni, kaúpwal, kituē'ti, kō'mwi, konot, korō'na, kot, kotō'kanmāi, kūmū'ti, lū'mūm, majáni, māliē'la, mū'ririk, nīláni, nūlim, nūrala, pātā'nkitaon (see pātā'k), pātō, pōñōki, pūñi, tápok, tau (see tau), tō'nūr, ūtutō'mwar, wātā'mwi, wō'rawō'r, wō'rawōrō'ñ, wūrāk.

On the death of a high chief of a tribe, that tribe often, if not always, ceases to use any word that repeats with distinctness and prominence his proper name (not his title). Even during the lifetime of a very high and greatly honored chief, the utterance of a word that distinctly gives his proper name is avoided. This is probably a great cause of the slight difference in the vocabularies of the five different tribes on the island.

ACCOUNT OF PONAPE.

Ponape, also called Ascension Island, is perhaps third in importance among the high or basaltic groups of the Caroline or West Micronesian Islands. The main island has a number of very small ones lying close about it, and the whole is surrounded by a reef seventy or eighty miles in circumference. The principal island is about sixty miles in circumference, and rises to nearly three thousand feet of height. The population was believed in 1856 to be about five thousand, divided into five tribes: Metalanim, Kiti, Wanega, Nut, and Jekoiij. The first two are the largest and most important, and possess each about two sevenths of the coast, and nearly all the fine land of the island; each of the others having about a seventh. The Kiti tribe is on the southern shore; the Metalanim, on the eastern; the Wanega, on the north-eastern; the Jekoiij, on the north-western; the Nut, the weakest of the five (numbering but two or three hundred), lies between the last two. The language has decided affinities with those of islands to the west, and traditions show some knowledge of these islands. But the natives even of most Micronesian islands are not understood on their first arrival here. The American mission was established on the island in 1852, the author being settled among the Metalanim tribe, and his colleague, Mr. Sturges (who still remains there), among the Kiti.

More detailed information respecting Ponape and its history during the past twenty years may be obtained from the "Missionary Herald" of those years (especially that for 1857, pp. 41-8), from a lecture by the author printed in the "Polynesian" (Honolulu) in 1860, and from a series of articles contributed (also by the author) to the "Friend" (Honolulu) between 1854 and 1857.
